

Eruption of May-June 1894 - The eruption of 1894 extended from the end of May to June 6th at least. The ash thrown out by the Canlaon about the end of May reached as far as Iloilo. On June 2nd, at 8 a.m. an earthquake of considerable intensity and duration was felt through Panay and Negros. On the same day, the volcano was reported emitting not only ash, but lava also and even stones of regular dimensions: underground rumblings were heard and incandescence was seen. The same manifestations of volcanic activity were repeated on the 6th, although to less extent and with less intensity.

(Revista Meteorologica del Observatorio de Manila, p. 166; El Archipielago Filipino, II, p. 344.)