

CLOUD FORMATIONS, like sunset or moonlight, have their own cult of worshippers. And this worship is as old as the hills. For the clouds are elements of exquisite beauty and lasting symbolism. A cloud has many moods and no two clouds or cloud formations are quite the same.

We usually associate the clouds not only with the sky but also with heaven. The angels are generally pictured as standing upon clouds. We think of Christ having ascended into heaven and disappeared from his disciples behind a cloud.

Just looking up at the sky can be a heart

RAIN CLOUDS are always either nimbo-stratus or cumulo-nimbus (above). At right, sunlight bursting through clouds is a sight that can very well lift up the heart. The cirro-cumulus (far right) looks like ribbed sands.
