

CONTENTS.

	Page.
Introduction.....	7
I. Origin of the Meteorological Service of the Philippines:
Foundation of Manila Observatory.....	8
First storms announced.....	9
The first typhoon warnings sent to Hongkong.....	10
II. Project for establishing an official service of secondary stations throughout the archipelago:
Preliminary notes.....	11
Many individuals assist the observatory.....	11
Attitude and disposition of the Manila authorities.....	12
III. Official erection and further development of the Meteorological Service:
Approbation of same by royal decree.....	13
Actual establishment of secondary stations and organization of same.....	14
Relation between the observatories of Hongkong and Manila.....	16
Opportunity of sending the warnings directly to Macao and Saigon.....	17
The Observatory of Zi-ka-wei.....	17
Meteorological service of Japan.....	18
IV. Meteorological Observatory of Manila after its official erection:
Translation of the Observatory to its present location in the new edifice.....	19
Fr. Faura's aneroid barometer.....	19
The Observatory takes part in various expositions.....	20
Its coöperation in other international works.....	21
The Algué and Bergholz barocyclonometers; books of both authors on cyclones.....	21
The Observatory and Mr. Dobereck.....	23
V. Apparatus and work at the central meteorological department and its relations with other centers in the Far East:
Apparatus for direct observation.....	26
Self-registering apparatus.....	27
Latest refraction nephoscope.....	27
The ceraunograph.....	29
The Vicentini microseismograph.....	29
Description of meteorological park.....	31
Meteorological observations and publications since the year 1865.....	32
Comparison of instruments.....	32
The ordinary weather notices.....	32
Typhoon warnings.....	33
Relations of the Observatory of Manila with other meteorological centers in the Far East.....	33
Map showing the foreign stations in telegraphic connection with Manila Observatory.....	36
VI. Official approval of the Meteorological Service by the Government of the United States:
Preliminary notes.....	36
Relations of the Observatory with the new authorities.....	37
New publications.....	39
New official declaration of the Philippine Meteorological Service.....	39
VII. Reorganization of the service of secondary stations in the whole archipelago:
Preliminary notes.....	42
Catalogue of new stations.....	44
Establishment of the principal stations.....	45
First meteorological expedition.....	46
Second expedition.....	47
Third expedition.....	48
The map of the new Meteorological Service.....	51